Burton P. Fabricand : The Science of Winning: A Random Walk on the Road to Riches before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Science of Winning: A Random Walk on the Road to Riches:

1 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Illogical and Incomprehensible TwattleBy M. FresaThe author endeavours to explain a method by which odds in winning against pari-mutuel pools are increased. The book starts by using mathematical formulae to calculate the profit expectations on horses favored by the public, but then ends in a mass of illogical and confusing "Rules of Similarity", by which efforts are made to document qualitative filters by which horses may be compared to one another. As someone said, ..."if you can't impress people with your brilliance, baffle them with your bull*". These "Rules" appear to be so. Buyers look elsewhere for logical systems by which athletes (equine in this case) may be compared to one another.
